optimization - university of cambridge - constraints, that may change from instance to instance of the problem, are expressed by functional constraints $g(x) = b$ or $g(x) \leq b$. sometimes the choice is made for mathematical convenience. constrained optimization: step by step - all of these problem fall under the category of constrained optimization. luckily, there is a uniform process that we can use to solve these problems. here's a guide to help you out. maximizing subject to a set of constraints: $(x, y) \geq 0$ max $f(x, y)$ subject ...
